K5 Psychological Distress

Interpretation

This client's total score falls within the High range (76th percentile). Individuals scoring in this range are likely experiencing high levels of psychological distress. They are likely to be frequently overwhelmed with feelings of nervousness, sadness, restlessness and fatigue. Further clinical assessment is advised to investigate the impact on daily life.

Scoring and Interpretation Information

For comprehensive information on the K-5, see here.

A total score is calculated by summing all items for a possible range of 5 to 25. Higher scores indicate higher levels of psychological distress.

Four categories of psychological distress were outlined by the Australian Institute of Health and Welfare (AIHW, 2009), and include:

- Low (5-7)
- Moderate (8-11)

Scoring and Interpretation Information (cont.)

- High (12–14)
- Very High (15–25)

A normative percentile is calculated, contextualising the responses in comparison to typical patterns of responding among Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islanders (Brinkley et al., 2021; Cunningham et al., 2012). For example, a percentile of 50 indicates average (and healthy) levels of distress, while a percentile of 90 indicates the respondent has more distress than 90% of the indigenous population.

A cut off score of 11 and above is indicative of clinically significant psychological distress, such as depression or anxiety symptoms (Brinckley, 2021).
